A Man Killed by His Son.—Abel Potter, a farmer in easy circumstances, and about 70 years old, was shot, of the 30th ult., at his residence in Greenfield, Mass., by his son, Philander F. Potter. The son had claimed a large sum as due him for labor, and threatened to kill his father if it was not paid. After dinner the father had laid down to sleep, and the son loaded a pistol and a double barrelled gun, and fired four times through the window and door, the last shot taking effect in the father's side, and producing a wound that must result in a speedy death. The son attempted to escape, but was arrested within half a mile of home.
